
(Read 1st) Proper forum etiquette on unsolicited personal message and advertising

Posted by Coolman!!! - 2007/11/02 02:35

Dear Friends,

You may have got some private messages sent from certain members promoting their own sites.

We do not encourage such sneaky and sly way of approaching Arsenalfriends members. I firmly believe that the Arsenal way is brave, refreshing, righteous and always above board. Our Arsenal board has always done things in this way.

As we are always kind and friendly, we are not going to ban anyone or insult anyone here but we will like to warn them that such behaviour is not the Arsenalfriends way. It will not be tolerated in future. Any future attempt to break up our happy family will also not be tolerated.

Best Regards

Go Gunners!!!

Just to add on to Coolman's comments,

This forum should not be used for any form of blatant advertisements. If you participate and contribute to the forum, you are more than welcome to add a signature that links to your website.

Other than that, please refrain from posting any advertisements. If you have something to sell, you can post it under the buy/sell category.

I like so much the etiquettes.

This forum is each time more cool !

Very good work!

yes, indeed !!! Don;t insult and say anything bad to anyone in this forum..and don't attempt to break our happy family here..

We are here to support and give ideas or opinions to help arsenal achieve a higher level in soccer..

A good message from coolman!!!
