
Steve Sidwell

Posted by Coolman!!! - 2008/06/19 04:01

The strange things in football.....

Chelsea got Sidwell to run down his contract at Reading so they wouldn't have to pay a transfer fee. Whatever amount Reading could have got would sure help them get some dough to buy a replacement player.

Now, Chelsea have just sold Sidwell to Aston Villa for £5.5m. Assuming just his salary of 50,000 per week, 5.5 - (50,000x52)will have meant that chelsea made a profit of about £3 m.

In this whole circle, Arsenal and Reading were robbed of any benefit in making him the player he is today. (although not a great player yet)

I guess this is why club management is starting to put sell on clause in their youth players in order to protect their investment.

I hope Wenger got this all figured out as I think we are the clubs releasing most of the promising players to the other clubs. It will be an impressive source of income.

=====

Re:Steve Sidwell

Posted by Hitman - 2008/06/19 16:45

Sidwell is a silly boy.
He should have stayed at Reading.

=====